WE FAVOR ACCEPTANCE OF HENRY FORD'S BID FOR MUSCLE SHOALS.

CONSTRUCTION MATERIALS MORE VALUABLE THAN THE PATCH WORK OF REFORM.

Sunday morning press dispatches bring the information that a Mr. Cranston an American business man, will install a radio outfit at Culion, Philippine Islands, for the exclusive benefit of the 5,000 lepers confined there. It is stated that the sounds of music on the ears of those poor unfortunates will prove very pleasurable, as such a large percent of the lepers, love music as do most of the natives.

And the lepers cannot play for themselves any longer as their lips and fingers are gone in so many cases or have lost their sense of touch due to the ravages of leprosy.

If the formation of right ideas in the minds of the leper Philippine islanders had begun early enough they would have known and obeyed enough of the laws of life and health to have warded off the terrible disease of leprosy, and so could have made their own music instead of having to have it sent to them by wireless.

Because cures and special attention after disability has arrived, are known to be of only limited value—because it is true that a "stitch in time saves forty-nine," makes it the duty of every conscientious citizen to back and support the campaigns now in progress over the state for our educational institutions. Reform is good but formation of character makes reform measures unnecessary—with all their inefficiency and high costs.

The money to be spent in furnishing music for the lepers in the Philippine islands, if it could have been used generations ago, possibly would have prevented the scourge of leprosy and many other diseases. If right education is given the youths of Alabama, they will be immune from the diseases of character, mind and body so prevalent in our day and generation. We talk about "constructive statesmanship"; the way to accomplish that end is to construct statesmen and stateswomen, out of the youthful raw material of our times. It is the avowed purpose of such institutions as the State University and Auburn College to supply such building material as the lives and characters of the youth of the state stand in need of. The schools are our human supply factories, and we are all being given an opportunity to take stock in them. There will be no money dividends declared and the returns investors in education will receive will not come to them individually—such returns may not be felt during the life of the present generation, but we must make such investments, we must sow the seeds of character and efficiency NOW. If there is to be any worthwhile harvest in the future of our state and country. As well tell a farmer, that he can sow his seeds today and reap a harvest in a day or a week, as to say we can have a great future generation and not educate the boys and girls that are to compose that generation.

Large caliber men, whether they are confessedly strong on so called altruism or not, will "fall for" the appeals that are made in behalf of better and more complete education—for every boy and girl in Alabama. For they know the dividends they will make possible are better than those of gold and more precious than rubies.

LEAD OF NEWSPAPER INFORMATION REQUIRES CLOSE CO-OPERATION.

Every newspaper for every fifteen persons, has been put down as a fair average for states. In the Northern states where many newspapers the proportion is larger. It is a fact that city dwellers will have their news as regularly as their cats, or smokes. But the figures of fifteen readers for all the papers as about right for Alabama. There are about a million people in the state—so do not seem to care enough about how the "world wags," to take a look at things as often as possible. Before the world war, during which time of stress newspaper reading became quite general, the number of daily news readers in this and other Southern states would have been much smaller than is now the case.

Barring those who read more than one newspaper—and there are many in this class, the combined circulation of all the newspapers in the state would not show a total of but a few hundred thousand—leaving other hundreds of thousands newsless, or depending on hearsay about happenings several days old.

In all fairness, as the records show, newspaper managements have done a large part in seeking to attract readers in large numbers. Some papers have all but gone broke trying to put enough talent and work on a newspaper to attract readers—either or no. Always the public responds, when a newspaper is enlarged and improved, but not always in proportion to the amount of money and effort contributed by the makers of the paper. In all fairness again, it should be stated that much of the non-interest in the news is due to carelessness or ignorance. In view of the fact that the number of voters—(the rulers of the country) is continually increasing, it would seem that the news reading population should increase very rapidly. Be it far from this paper to question the intelligence of the women voters, they are as well read and competent as their brother voters, but they have not had as much experience in politics (this term used in its best sense) as have the men, consequently they have not accumulated as much "political lore."

It would seem fair to expect that the women, in the near future would take a larger interest in newspapers in order to keep in touch with political events—if for no other reason. If as many women can be added to the lists of news readers, as there are men at the present time subscriptions to papers would almost double in a short while.

There is no attempt to shoulder off the blame for the comparatively small number of daily newspaper readers, on the public entirely—papers, like all else human have their sins of omission and commission—they are not perfect but, if they were, possibly the million or so out of the fold would not be brought into the company of those who read daily what is going on daily throughout the world. But if there were people who knew enough to create a perfect paper, and had a perfect mechanical equipment and the money to do so, would they not go broke long before they got a sufficient number of readers to pay for the increased expense?

The spread of knowledge, whether it is attempted by newspapers, schools, churches, clubs, and all other organizations aiming at general improvement, is a super-human task, and it can be accomplished successfully only as all hands, who can, will get together and co-operate to the full extent of their ability.

NO WAR TO BE WAGED TO DEFEND CHRISTIANITY AGAINST MOHAMMEDANISM

Since the close of the World war, affairs in the Near East have been steadily moving to their present status. It is said that the French regarded the seizure of Constantinople, by the English as a piece of bad faith; that act interfered with the French dream of dominating the east shores of the Mediterranean sea. In order to maintain between themselves a kind of balance of power, France and England have been playing Greece and Turkey as pawns on the international chess board. Had neither of these nations won a great or decisive victory over the other there would have been no near east crisis as now. Nobody would have worried at the Greeks and Turks killing off each other, as long as neither threatened to take the Dardanelles, one of the two or three great trade routes of the world.

The prospect of the Turk re-entering Europe is not a pleasing one. But this country can have nothing to say now; the time was when by a vote of Congress to take care of the Armenian Christians, this near East disturbance would have been averted. But we deliberately chose to let the Armenians be a prey to their ancient Mohammedan enemies.

That choice was not the first one this country has made, when it came to defending the helpless. Our failure to check the Armenian massacres, meant that once again, America refused to fight for the Christian religion. It seems now there will be no fight against Mohammedanism; we have set the world such a perfectly splendid example of "hands off" whenever the helpless are attacked—no wonder it is probable that the "powers" will meekly submit to the return of the Turkish flag to Constantinople. Humanity claims such as the Armenians represented, have been scrapped the world is refusing enmasse to subscribe to the doctrine that we are our brother's keeper. But why worry. We had a chance to defend humanity when through Mr. Wilson, the Armenians held out their hands to us and begged and prayed that we would protect them. We refused; and for us now to take up arms in defense of a religion we have refused to put into practice, would seem very inconsistent. To defend Christianity as a religious creed, against a Mohammedan creed will not appeal to a world that has refused to even try to enforce the demands of Christianity.

SMYRNA.

Smyrna, the outraged city of Asia Minor, is the oldest settlement in the world.

Its birth was in the remotest past of which we have any knowledge. Its origin is lost in myths.

It has borne several poetic names. One of these is the Crown of Sonia; another, the Eye of Anatolia, still another, the Pearl of the East.

An authority has it that Tantalus was its founder in 1500 B. C. Its name is stated to have come from Smyrne, the Amazon, wife of Theseus. It was colonized by the Greeks soon after the Trojan war. It was constantly fought over by the Aeolians and the Ionians and suffered much. It was captured and dismantled by Alyattes, King of Sardis, in 698 B. C. and was later rebuilt by Alexander the Great. From that time it has been the great city of Asia Minor.

Tamerlane captured it in 1401, filled up its port, destroyed much of it and butchered its inhabitants. Since 1424 it has remained in the undisputed possession of the Ottomans, though the greater part of its population are Greeks. The and I will give thee a crown of life."

For nineteen centuries it has been the seat of a Christian Bishop, the most noted of whom was Polycarp, the martyr, who is said to have been a disciple of St. John.

And this is the city laid bare by this twentieth century Tamerlane, this modern Attila, this more than criminal Alaric.

It has been seized and depopulated in the face of a civilization that should condone no such things, should rise in wrath and smite the barbarous hosts that committed the egregious crime. Instead we find European powers paying the commander of the Turks the honors of a triumph. They recognize him as a noble soldier and have agreed to take him to their bosoms, admit him to fraternity and grant him such territorial rights and lordly powers as he asks.—Nashville Banner.

Others are Turks, Armenians, Europeans, and Jews. It is a seat of learning and enlightenment, of beautiful homes and public buildings.

It figured prominently in the early history of the Christian church. To its Bishop one of the letters of the Book of Revelations was addressed:

"Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer; behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days; be thou faithful unto death,

MARKING SITE OF FORMER STATE CAPITAL.

Distinguished citizens of Alabama will today dedicate a boulder to mark the site of old St. Stephens on the bluffs of the Tombigbee. It was the territorial capital of Alabama. Remote from the activities of the state as it grew after entering the union in 1819, the warehouses and homes built there were gradually abandoned. Now it is field and forest again.

St. Stephens was established as a Spanish fort in 1790. In 1815, after Alabama, which had been a part of Mississippi territory, was created Alabama territory, the first Alabama territorial legislature convened there. The United States court was located there, and for many years it was the seat of justice of Washington county. William Bibb, the first territorial governor, had his headquarters at St. Stephens.

The boulder was carried up the Alabama river to the banks of the Tombigbee in barges, there being neither railroads nor good highways to the original St. Stephens, but a good road from the river now covers the distance to the site of the old capital and future tourists will be able to visit the spot.

It is well worth while to treasure these landmarks of history and designate them by monuments or in other ways. A people with a history cherish it, because out of it they gather some of the spirit of the good men and women who have gone before.—Age-Herald.

STATEMENT OF OWNERSHIP.

Management, Circulation, etc., required by the Act of Congress of August 24, 1912, of The Albany-Decatur Daily, published daily except Sunday, at Albany, Ala., for October, 1922.

STATE OF ALABAMA—County of Morgan, ss.

I, for me, a notary public in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared W. R. Shelton, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the manager of the Albany-Decatur Daily and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management (and if a daily paper, the circulation), etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 443, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to-wit:

(1) That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are:

Publisher, Tennessee Valley Printing Company, Albany, Ala.; Editor, W. R. Shelton, Albany, Ala.; Business manager, W. R. Shelton, Albany, Ala.

(2) That the owners are: W. R. Shelton, Mrs. W. R. Shelton, R. T. Sheppard, Albany, Ala.

(3) That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: (If there are none, so state.)

None.

(4) That the two paragraphs next above giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities as a capacity other than that of bona fide owners; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

(5) That the average number of copies of each issue of this publication sold or distributed, through the mails or otherwise, to paid subscribers during the six months preceding the date shown above is 2,600. (This information is required from daily publications only.)

W. R. SHELTON,

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 27th day of September, 1922.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON

The Authority on Home Cooking

Seven Delicious Noodle Delicacies.

Noodles are liked by nearly everybody, and a number of varieties, recipes for which have been borrowed from other nations, grace the American table. The ingredients are always much the same, but they vary in treatment by different cooks. Most people buy the noodles in packages, for they are a nuisance to make if time is limited. Even the Chinese have the package habit, now that they have a big noodle factory in New York, from which the noodles are shipped to all the Chinese restaurants in the United States and Canada.

Chinese Min. (Noodles.)

Beat an egg with a half saltspoonful of salt and add enough sifted flour to make a stiff dough. Roll it out as thin as possible and dry on a fine cloth, then roll up tightly and cut in very thin slices with a sharp knife. Pull apart and let dry down. Drop the noodles into clear soup.

Chinese Fried Noodles.

Put two pounds of noodles into a steaming pot of water. Steam for a half-hour. After they are done, pull them apart with a fork. Put three table-spoonfuls of fat into a frying pan. When it is hot, add the noodles, juice of an onion, salt, and a little pepper and fry them brown. Drain and serve with a rich brown gravy turned over them.

German Noodles.

Make a thin batter of two beaten eggs, half a cupful of milk, a half saltspoonful of salt, a half cupful of grated dairy cheese, a little pepper and enough flour to hold the batter. When the soup boils, strain the batter into it through a rather fine colander and boil fifteen minutes.

Baked Noodles.

Add a package of noodles to fast boiling salt water and boil for fifteen minutes. Drain, run cold water through to separate them, and then put in milk to cover them. Add a generous lump of soft butter, salt, pepper, juice of an onion and a half-cupful of grated cheese. Heat, then pour all a buttered baking-dish with the noodles, cover with a layer of crumbs, then add the rest of the noodles and dust the top with crumbs and grated cheese. Bake a delicate brown and serve as a luncheon dish instead of meat.

Spanish Noodles.

Cook one pound of fine noodles in boiling salted water. Chop two peppers, after seeding them, one Spanish onion and two fresh tomatoes. Fry the vegetables in enough olive oil to cover the bottom of the frying-pan. Season with pepper, salt and a little sugar. When done, but not browned, add the noodles, after draining and blanching in cold water. Stir and heat through, then serve with ham or roast pork.

Italian Noodles.

The Italian noodles are really called tagliarini in Italy. They are made of a pint of sifted flour, a teaspoonful of salt and two eggs beaten to a stiff paste with a little cold water. Mix, then let the paste stand for ten minutes, roll it out thin, cover with a cloth and let stand ten minutes longer, then fold and roll into a close roll and cut down with a sharp knife. Let stand, after cutting, for twenty minutes to dry, then drop into hot salted water and boil fifteen minutes. Drain and serve with a little melted butter and dust with grated Parmesan cheese.

Hungarian Noodles.

The Hungarian noodles are made by breaking two eggs into a basin with a tablespoonful of milk and a saltspoonful of salt. Sift in enough flour to make a stiff dough, knead it like bread-dough until it is smooth and elastic, then divide into six portions. Roll each portion out in turn as thin as paper and roll up tight and slice down thin. Let stand and dry for fifteen minutes. When dry, put into a glass preserve jar for future use all that are not used in the day's soup. Noodles of all sorts should be used only with a clear soup.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a young man, 21 years of age, and am keeping company with a girl who is 20.

We have been going together for 12 months, thinking the world of each other, and intend to be married before long. She says she will marry me if I ask her parents' consent, regardless of what their answer may be. She is of age, and I think it would be all right to marry without asking.

I am a little "backward in going forward" to ask. Do you think it advisable to ask her parents' consent? Do you think that if she loves me she will marry me without asking them? INTERROGATION.

INTERROGATION: Why not go to her father like a man, tell him you love his daughter, and ask his permission to marry her? Surely anything as important as this cannot be too much of an undertaking, even if you are bashful.

It would be very wrong and unkind to ask the girl to run away with you. Think what she owes her parents. Should they not be with her on that most important of days—the day of her wedding?

There is always an unfortunate atmosphere around a runaway marriage. Do you want to subject your fiancée to it?

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a girl 24 years of age, and have had a number of proposals, but have not consented to any. Now, I am beginning to see some of my mistakes, and would like to settle down.

I am popular, and have many friends, and I belong to different societies, but I cannot find any one friend in my home town my age. Do you recommend marrying a widower or making friendship with a younger class of boys?

Would it be right to stay at home an unhappy old maid or marry a boy three years younger?

Do you think it is wise to wait till you are 25 or 30 years old to pick a husband? WORRIED DOT.

WORRIED DOT: You seem to be more worried about getting married, Dot, than about the man you would marry.

A happy marriage is based on love and companionship. Whether the man is a widower or not doesn't matter, or if the man is not too much younger than yourself, provided you are congenial.

Don't lose track of the fact that you must love some one very deeply to marry at all. That is the chief consideration.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a young girl, and have been going with a young man for some time. He has always seemed to respect me, and to care for me. He tells every one how much he cares for me.

I have always liked him, too, until the other night, when I was expecting him, he kissed me. I told him how terrible I thought his action was.

Should I continue being friends with him or give him up?

SMILES: It may not be necessary to give up the young man, but have a frank talk with him. Tell him that you do not want to have him kiss you, and that if he wishes to be friends with you he must treat you as he always did before the disastrous accident.

It's Too Rough a Sport for Ma

Week's Revival At First Methodist Church Brought to Close Sunday

The eight day's revival, which began in the First Methodist Church, of Decatur last Sunday, closed last night with an eloquent sermon by Evangelist Kimbrough, of Cullman, and with large additions to the Church. The congregation was large as had been the case at most of the other services for the past week.

The two climax services of the revival were held yesterday. The evening service was the most largely attended, although the number present at 11 o'clock comforted by filled the church auditorium.

Rev. Mr. Kimbrough, who did most of the preaching for the revival, occupied the pulpit at both the morning and evening services.

"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God to those who are called according to His purpose," was the text used by the preacher at the morning service.

There was a beautiful solo by Mrs. J. M. Jetty. The pastor, Rev. G. M. Davenport, announced that 25 had signed a desire to unite with the church and they were accordingly received into full fellowship.

Preceding the preaching, Pastor Davenport expressed on behalf of the church's heartfelt appreciation for the faithful services of Rev. Kimbrough, and led the congregation in an earnest prayer.

In closing his sermon after repeating his text Rev. Kimbrough inquired: "What is good?" What is the "summum bonum of life?" Answering his own question the speaker first told his hearers that some of the things held as "good," by many were really not good at all. He declared that "wealth" was not good per se; although it was not entirely bad. He said wealth was merely a means to an end and that as to whether the end was good or bad depended upon the person who wished wealth. It was shown that "fame" lacked a great deal of being a "good"—as there was "ill fame" as well as "fair fame." In connection with the distinctions the speaker made as to what is good—he quoted the well known words in Gray's elegy—"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power and all the beauty or wealth ere gave, await alike the inevitable hour; that paths of glory lead but to the grave."

In the first place the statement in the opening of the text—"all things work" was taken up by the speaker, who showed that in the scientific world there is not an atom of matter but what is in constant motion, and that close observation revealed the fact that the atoms were working toward some desired end. It was declared that matter was "working together" or cooperation, instead of moving at random. As another evidence of "design" in nature the speaker referred to the way plants and animals had appeared on the earth—as he spoke of how the vegetable and animal kingdoms are mutually dependent on each other. He said that whereas the animals had to have air to breathe that was free, that plants lived by breathing carbon-dioxide, a gas that was poison to human beings. He said that certain mixtures poison in themselves, when put into proper solution were wholesome and beneficial. He said that all that came in life, if properly related by a proper person "worked together for good."

The text words: "To them that love God" was dwelt upon at length. Two reasons were assigned, as showing that it must be true that "all things work together for good."

God is the first cause of love and His love in the heart controls. "Keep thine heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." In the second place, the history of His race shows that God has loved and cared for them in the past. The speaker said that man himself was in God's image, was a foreshadowing of God.

Says Paul Had Right to Speak.

In reference to God's individual dealings with individual men, the speaker said of all men of history St. Paul was perhaps the best qualified to speak. He said the great Apostle had come through "many dangers, toils and snares," and yet he was able to see and to say that "all things work together for good to them that love God." The speaker taught that Paul had learned by God's grace to properly relate the great facts of life and to so use his experience as that they all helped instead of hindered him. It was declared that until a person had got to where he could transform and transmute life's cares, joys and sorrows, they could not be said to be wise. Socrates statement that the "summum bonum" of life was to approach as nearly as possible to the character of God, was quoted by the preacher, who evidently believed that if that ancient Greek philosopher lived today he would accept Christ as the truest and best revelation we have of God.

It was pointed out that what people saw in life they would get out of it, and the well known story of the Italian Sculptor was told of how that artist saw an angel in a block of stone while most people only saw difficulties in the same stone, or nothing whatever.

Brevity, the Soul of wit.
As a street car arrived at a transfer point in Montreal a woman who had been riding on the car commenced to argue with the conductor about a transfer which a conductor on another car had given her. She blocked the car entrance and kept a crowd of impatient people from getting on. Having completed a long and perfectly incoherent story, she got off, much to the relief of the conductor. Turning to a man on the platform, the conductor shook his head sadly and remarked: "She ain't wit!" Harper's Monthly.

If He Did.
"On the Pacific coast," said the traveler, "we go out in boats, and nothing less than a 100-pound fish is considered sport." "Sense me," said the colored man, "Yo' say yo' fish 100-pound fish?" "Why certainly we do." "Ain't yo' sheered yo' right?"

Chicago Rotten, Ex-Officer Says

(Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—Chicago is "rotten from center to circumference," Rev. J. H. Williamson, discharged law enforcer, said in his first sermon after leaving the city hall. "There are more than 5,000 hell holes operating as coffee shops," he declared.

Romans Used to Eat Moths.

Moths and butterflies might not seem to us of much value as a food, but the Romans used them, as well as beetles, as an article of diet.

Timely.
Lord Frederick Thellusson tells some excellent stories in "There, There and Everywhere." Here is one of Archbishop Mauger of Exeter. When he was a bishop of Peterborough he met, in the parson's quarters of this town, a sailor who had just turned out of a public house. The man recognized the bishop, and, raising his hat in a gesture of mock benediction, called out, "The Lord be with you." "And with thy spirits," answered Mauger.

To stop wine flies.
A new method of checking fire flies is by means of boxes of the rock dust suspended across the roof of the tunnel. Any shock due to an explosion is sufficient to cause them to break away from their supports, and the finely divided dust falls into the passage and prevents the flames from

THE RECIPE

By Juanita Hamel

WHY is it that two cooks may arrive at very different results though they start out to make the very same delicacy? Take that dainty confection called angel cake, for example. One cook achieves a leaden mass—the other arrives at heavenly lightness. How? Why? Is it ALL in the recipe? Or is it necessary that every recipe, for perfect results, be seasoned with LOVE?

LABOR PAID FOR.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 2.—Special.—Following the decision of Governor Kilby to remove all state convicts from the Aldrich mines unless the indebtedness due the state was paid by Oct. 1, David Roberts, Jr., trustee of the Montevallo Mining Company, paid $36,000, due up to Jan. 24, at which time the company passed into the bankrupt court.

TENSION RELAXES

(Associated Press)

LONDON, Oct. 2.—There is a relaxation today of the tension over the Near Eastern situation. The despondency in the press gave way to hope. The press was of the general opinion that General Harrington has saved Great Britain from a war thus far and the hope was expressed that he will be left with a free hand to deal with the situation until it is settled.

Bible Thought for Today

THE ONLY HELP—For I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee.—Isaiah 41: 13.

CAPITAL EXCITED

(Associated Press)

MONTGOMERY, Oct. 2.—A feeling of excitement and tense anxiety is prevalent here since the shooting Saturday of George S. Wilson, Montgomery county game warden, by a negro not yet captured. Wilson is in a critical condition. Authorities are trailing Joe Terre 1, negro, who is alleged to have done the shooting.

WORKS FOR CHILD MUST KEEP WELL

Mothers in a Like Situation Should Read This Letter from Mrs. Enrico

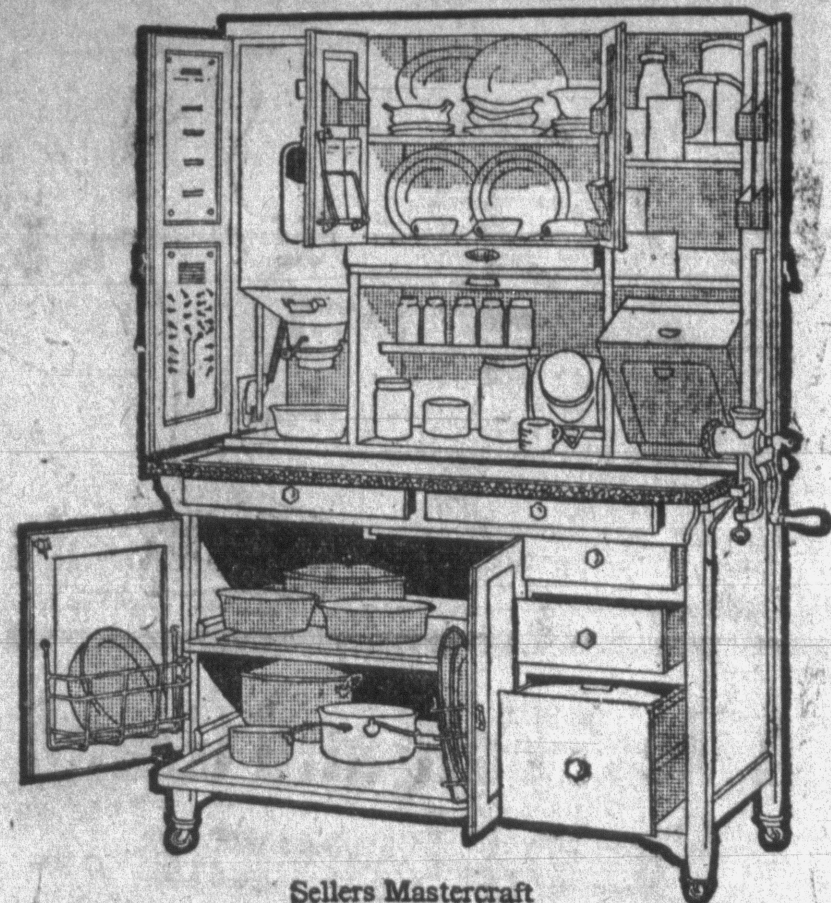

Chicago, Illinois.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a serious trouble. I had tried doctors and all said the same—an operation. At first I only felt the pain on my left side, but later I seemed to feel it on both sides. I am a power sewing-machine operator and have a little girl to support. I work in a tailor shop and that line of work has been very slack this year and I am home part of the time. I do not like to take any chances, so I consulted my friends, and one lady said, 'Take Lydia Pinkham's medicine,' so I did. I have felt better right along and am in good enough health to go to work. I recommend your Vegetable Compound and Sensitive Wash to all."—Mrs. MARY ENRICO, 459 N. Carpenter St., Chicago, Illinois.

Often the mother is obliged to support her children and good health is necessary. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is just the medicine you can depend upon. It is a medicine for women's ailments and the relief it brought Mrs. Enrico it may bring to you. Keep well by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

THE LATEST

"All the world's a stage."
"Hear we're gonna have a long skirted chorus this winter," remarked Uncle Tobe Snarl of Kicker County.

A straight path's a lot easier to travel than a crooked one, but some folks don't seem to know it.

LIKE AN ELEPHANT

While in the country last summer a little city boy saw his first baby pig, and it made a great impression on him. So great was the impression, in fact, that the youngster made the pig the first object of his concern when the family again visited the country place this spring.

"Where is my little piggie?" he immediately inquired.

"Come with me and I'll show you," his country cousin replied.

When the city boy reached the pen with his companion and saw what looked to be about eight hundred pounds of pork "on the hoof" he was dumbfounded.

"And did that little piggie grow as much as that in one year?"

"Yes."

In open-eyed wonder the boy exclaimed. "Gee! I betcha when I come back next summer he'll have a truck."

AN ODE TO A DOG AND A CAT

Fleas, fleas, fleas, fleas, fleas,
Fleas, fleas, fleas, fleas, fleas,

Fleas, fleas, fleas, fleas, fleas,
Fleas, fleas, fleas, fleas, fleas,

Marriage steadies a man. It gives him so much to do he hasn't time for foolishness.

"What's in a name?" try to use somebody's else at the bottom of a check and you'll find out.

YOUR MONEY OR YOUR LIFE

The other day when I reached home I said unto my wife,

"I know you will be happy, dear, I've just insured my life.

And so, if I should meet my death Tomorrow, let us say,

A check for fifty thousand Will be yours that very day."

I knew 'twould make her happy. So I took her by the hand And waited for the answer—

And she said, "Won't that be grand"

A cowman from Medicine Bow stepped into a cigar store in Chicago and asked for a match.

"Matches," replied the clerk, "are for sale, not to give away."

"How much are they?"

"One cent a box."

"The cowman bought a box, and handed it back after taking out a match.

"Here," he said put that back on your shelf, and when a gentleman asks you for a light give him one."

Now, when the office starts out to seek the man, it may find his wife.

A LINE TO GET 'EM

"Who'll be the first dealer to advertise: 'Get an automobile or an automobile will get you'?"

WHERE IT FALLS DOWN

Prof: "Do you believe in a more elastic currency?"

Scholar: "No, it's elastic enough. Why not make it more adhesive?"

We are made of dust but some people want the earth.

A tenderfoot who was at a restaurant when an Indian attack was expected, approached the commanding officer and asked: "Say, Colonel, which was the worst Indians, the hostile ones or the ones who go on fact?"

College Humor

BLACK—"Why re you looking so worried?"

JACK—"I just lost $6,000 in a poker game."

"Good Lord!"

BLACK—"Yes, and the dickens of it is, $25 in cash."

The fellow who thinks he is the 'whole cheese' invariably turns out to be but a piece of it.

She (critically)—I never could see much in those Crepe de Chine dresses.

He (also a critic)—Ah, my dear, out you never looked at them in the right light.

People who live in glass houses should not take saxophone lessons.

A proud young father telegraphed his news of his happiness to his brother in these words: "A handsome boy has come to my house and intends to be your nephew. We are doing our best to give him a proper welcome."

The brother, however, failed to see the point and wired back: "I have no nephew; the young man is an imposter."

In the next political campaign everybody is sure to get some appointment, if only disappointment.

The Success Family.

The father of Success is Work—the mother of Success is Ambition. The oldest son is Common Sense.

Some of the other boys are Perseverance, Honesty, Thoroughness, Foresight, Enthusiasm and Cooperation. The oldest daughter is Character.

Some of the sisters are Cheerfulness, Loyalty, Courtesy, Care, Economy, Sincerity and Harmony. The baby is Opportunity. Get acquainted with the "old man" and you will be able to get along pretty well with the rest of the family.

Lamp The Vamp.

Curse on thee little "Vamp," With thy fascinating lamp, With thy little sawed off skirt, And abbreviated shirt;

With thine arms and shoulders bare And thy limbs, at which I stare, With thy form so full of life, I almost forget my wife.

"Poor darling, You must have been frightened to death when the burglar broke into your room."

"Frightened's no name for it; I was dressing."

"How embarrassing, what did you do?"

"Oh, he was a gentleman burglar, he covered me with his revolver."

A Rare One.

I once knew A girl Who was so modest That she wouldn't Even do Improper fractions.

In some states there is a law against tipping—which is observed—well, it is observed as carefully as some other laws which are not observed at all.

Suspenders makers live on the fat of the land.

Metals That Burn.

Metals, if finely powdered, will burn rapidly. In one recent explosion of aluminum dust six girls lost their lives and many more were injured. An explosion of hard-rubber dust, not long ago, resulted in the deaths of six workmen. Within the last few years there have been many such disasters in sugar mills, candy factories, spice mills, cork factories, drug works, paper mills, etc. Any kind of dust that is combustible will explode if distributed plentifully through the air of a closed place and ignited.

Funeral Today For
Mrs. W. J. Drake

Funeral services for Mrs. W. J. Drake will be held at the city cemetery Tuesday with Dr. W. P. Wilks, and Dr. J. F. Sturdivant, pastor of the Central Baptist Church, the Central Methodist Church, conducting the services.

Mrs. Drake is survived by her husband W. J. Drake, whose former home was in the Twin Cities before he and his family removed to Ennis, Texas, where Mrs. Drake died. One child two years old survived her mother, Mrs. Drake before her marriage was Miss Lilly Bauer, of Belle Mina.

McCUTCHEON DIES.

Dallas McCutcheon, of Valhermosa Springs, a well known citizen of that place, died last Friday at his home near there. Burial services were held Saturday, being conducted by Rev. J. H. Hill. Mr. McCutcheon leaves a wife and one child. Interment was made in the Valhermosa cemetery.

AGNES AYRES IS DRESSED

Tuesday's crowds at the Princess will see rich toilettes, lots of them, of the latest style, in "The Ordeal," Agnes Ayres latest Paramount.

Miss Ayres interprets the part of a young widow who inherits a fortune which she will lose if she marries again. Windows with money are expected to be well dressed, hence Miss Ayres' wardrobe is said to be a delight to the eye.

In Humor and Irony. As Cendrars in the past, the qualification was driven to take refuge in humorous irony in order to make known his sentiments without giving a handle to the Sacred office—so, too, Goethe was able, in the character of a humorist, to express what as a minister of state and a courier he would not have ventured to say out right. Goethe never suppressed the truth, but when debarred from displaying the naked truth he draped it in humor and irony.—He'ae.

The Harvest Month

"When the frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock"—when the lethargy of summer is behind us, and the enthusiasm of autumn wakes us to the responsibilities yet in store before the year closes, then we need the wholesome, mildly stimulating effect of good coffee.

365 days in the year—366 days, leap-year—Alameda is the finest grade of pure coffee to be had anywhere, at the price.

ALAMEDA

didn't "just happen"—it is not a magic blend subject to variations in flavor, but the result of the most pains-taking care in manufacture, from the time the green coffee beans are chosen by our experts until the finished product comes to you in full-weight, one and three-pound tins.

Every lot of green coffee used in the blending of Alameda has been sampled and cup-tested in our laboratories, to insure the cup taste on your table. Alameda quality is the same always, and it's always the best. No premiums or coupons. You get what you expect—QUALITY COFFEE.
